Senator Chamberlain said: "I candidly admit that all I know about the so-called American Legion is what I heave read in newspapers. but all press accounts agree that the idea is to form a body of 300,000 men with military experience. "I don't believe the American people would stand for a revolution, but at any rate we don't want one. With such a body as the proposed American Legion, you cannot tell what would happen. You put some ambitious and popular man at the head of 300,000 arm-ed and trained men and he could very quickly upset the entire Government of the United States. I regard the proposed American Legion as a menace to the safety and peace of the United

"Reports say that the projectors of the American legion plan to divide the nation into quasi-military districts with divisions, corps regiments, and com-panies of soldiers. That obviously would violate the laws of a number of States. Some States have laws forbidding bodies of men other than the regularly organ-ized militia and troops of the United States from associating together as a military organization and forbidding States from associating together as a military organization and forbidding them to drill or parade with arms.

"The Supreme Court of the United States, in a decision on January 4, 1886, upheld such a law. Further, the Constitution vests the organization of the army entirely in Congress, except in regard to the organization of the militia by the States, and Congress certainly. by the States, and Congress certainly has had no hand in the organization of this so-called American Legion. It is stated that army officials are active in the organization of the proposed legion.
The President, as commander-in-chief of the army, has power to stop that sort of thing."

240 Exchanged German Prisoners Pass Geneva

GENEVA, March 4.- The first trainload of maimed German prisoners of war, who are to be exchanged for wounded French soldiers, arrived here from Lyons, homeward bound. The special glided into the station between lanes of Swiss troops.

The cars were immediately boarded by Red Cross nurses, who distributed gifts of oranges, chocolate and other delicacies among the sufferers, relieving their French co-workers of the responsibility of caring for the passengers.

Swiss government physicians went rapidly through the train, but found that rapidly through the train, but found that none of the 240 Germans aboard required medical attention.

All of them seemed cheerful and contented. They accepted gratefully the gifts showered upon them.

There was no demonstration, as the public was excluded from the station.

Most was excluded from the station.

Most of the Germans had been crip-pled by the loss of a leg or an arm and many of them had lost two limbs. Most of them were smoking cigarettes. They paid tribute to the kind treat-ment they had received in French hos-pitals. After a long stop, the train left for Schaffhausen, at the northernmost point in Switzerland, where it will pass the train carrying incapacitated French prisoners on their way home.

By J. R. HILDEBRAND.

The American Genetic Association has thrown the "Stop, Look, the American Legion of 300,000 trained Listen" sign across the track of early marriages. From a eugenic standpoint they are all wrong. To prove confidence in this theory a $200 prize is offered for anyone who can show that mentally superior children are the products of early marriages.

> This announcement was made today by Paul Popence, editor of Heredity, the monthly publication of the Genetic Association. This stand taken by modern eugenists, he explained, is in direct contradiction of the theory, of Galton, who advocated early marriages on the ground that "if the races best fitted to occupy the land are encouraged to marry early, they will breed down the others in a very few Eugenists, at first, looked only to the physical vigor of the human family, Mr. Fopence explained. Many of the more recent investigators on the subject, including men like Dr. Alexander Graham Bell. of Washington, also are looking to the mental possibilities of intelligent human breeding. "This prize of $200 is offered in two parts of $100 each." Mr. Popence said. "The money was put into the treasury of the Genetic Association by Mr. Redfield, who will pay $100 of it to anyone who can show that any superior individual ever was produced by breeding at the rate of four generations to the century; that is, one whose date of hirth is not more than 100 years after the average date of birth of his sixteen great-great-grandparents. "Mr. Johnson holds that the conclusion that late children are superior mentally is wholly unwarranted," said Mr. Popenoe. "He sets forth in "Heredity this month his theory on this matter."

In "Heredity" Mr. Johnson says of the Redfield theory: "Mr. Redfield is quite safe in holding that in illustrious stocks the generations are long. It is just this, I contend, that calls for remedy. To conclude from this, however, that late children are superior mentally is not warranted. Such late births will still be found to be prevalent with the superior, irrespective of whether late children shall be shown to be equal or superior to early children of the same parents. Reasons for these delayed marriages and births are now too familiar to call for repetition here. "The mere lengthening of the generations of all stocks will not change the inl-balanced production of the next generation. It is necessary to increase the reproduction of the superior relative to the inferior, no matter to what other device resort may be made."

Mr. Popence also pointed out that "assuming for the sake of argument that the children of young parents are in-ferior, are they inferior because their parents are young, or are they inferior because they are first born children?" An investigation to look into this point
